It's the Emperor himself in Grey Seal Puppets' clever adaptation of The Emperor's New Clothes . Not only is this Emperor big and pink, he just happens to be a pig. The Hans Christian Andersen story takes on a whole new dimension as this classic tale is transformed into a fable. The crafty tailors are foxes; the prime minister is a near-sighted camel; and the councilor is a befuddled old walrus. Even the audience takes part, as animals, of course

They've dug holes for famous canals, railroads, highways, airports and skyscrapers. But times have changed and newer, fancier shovels have become fashionable, leaving Mike and Mary Anne out of work and down to their last dime. Their final hope could be the little town of Poppesville, which needs a basement dug for its new City Hall. Mike and Mary Anne are determined to get the job, but first they have to outbid the Diesel Shovel, the Electric Shovel and even the state-of-the-art, cappuccino-making Nucleonic Diggatron! Virginia Lee Burton's 1939 classic tale of hard work, determination and friendship comes to life in Eric Lane Barnes' delightful musical, in which we learn that the newest, biggest or most expensive isn't necessarily the best.

Speaking the Wrights' own words and dressed in period costumes, professional actors portray the brothers with enthusiasm and vigor. Wilbur and Orville Wright construct an abstract replica of the famous flyer while revealing their biographies and re-living the poetry of their influences, discoveries, failures, achievements and successes. Audience members may participate, too, by interjecting aviation and space exploration highlights from previous centuries and the current one.

This timeless comedy pits the "good" girls and boys against those individuals who would rather buck the system, in favor of finding their own true selves. Six actors, sixty minutes - comic hijinks galore!
